SATURDAY JULY 4 1863.

REVISTA DE B. AYRES.

The second number of this most valuable publication, corresponding to the month of June, is before us. The history of the Port, continues, from the time of Governor Saavedra (1598) down to 1602. In this brief interval we read of the arrival of a Flemish barque "Mundo de Plata" with a valuable cargo (45,000 rls.) confiscated by the vice-roy, because Flanders was then in revolt from the Spanish crown. At this time the Custom-house was not built, and the goods were deposited in various stores through town, belonging to Messrs. Muñoz, Montalvo, and others. We have an interesting explanation of the form of Government: besides the vice-roy, or Adelantado, there was a Lieutenant General who ruled in his absence, and in each city a Lieutenant-Governor whose jurisdiction embraced the adjacent district. The "Cabildos" were at once judicial and municipal bodies, with Alcaldes Ordinaries for agents. There were also Judges, and a Finance-secretary, appointed by the Crown. In 1601, a force of 500 soldiers arrived en route overland for Chile, but the city was so poor that it could hardly find them necessaries for the journey. This year was still more remarkable, as the first physician and school-master arrived in Buenos Ayres: the former was Manuel Alvarez, the latter Francisco Victoria. A wind-mill was also erected by D. Bartolomé Ramon. About this time was erected the convent of S. Francisco, which counted 18 friars in 1603, as is seen in their petition for oil and wine for the Divine service: this was at first refused for want of funds, but soon after conceded.

Crossing the Andes, gives a florid account of the Cordillera, indicating 4 passes: Uspallata, Copiapó, San Francisco and Cobija. The first, besides being most picturesque, is the best and oldest, hospices having been erected in the last century, for the security of travellers. The distance is 80 leagues and requires usually 6 days. From a table-land 9000 feet high is obtained a magnificent panorama, which can only be appreciated by personal experience, or by reading the glowing account here furnished.

Annals of Catamarca, relate that this province separated from Tucuman in 1821. Its population is set down at 50,000, being in 1801 only 16,000 souls. It has a Franciscan convent and school, besides valuable mines and agricultural resources. The city of Catamarca was built 1607, and first called London in honor of our Queen Mary, wife of Philip of Spain. It was subsequently removed, owing to the attacks of the Calchaqui Indians, 1633. Tradition mentions a miraculous image of the B. Virgin, which is still greatly honored.

The records for the month, are well worth perusal, displaying much historical research, and affording an excellent table of reference.

In light reading, we have 'The Slave of the Orinoco,' by F. A. 'The Defile of Lules,' is replete with fanciful word-painting and poetic reflections, from the graceful pen of Dr Navarro Viola. An amusing anecdote, called 'Redondilla,' gives an impromptu epigram, by Quevedo. The poet was playing cards with several ladies in the Duchess of Alba's apartment, contrary to the royal wish, when the King entering, all the ladies fled, and to the question, 'What's up?' Quevedo replied:—

Que ha de ser Rey español?
Decir Alba á las estrellas
Que se retirarán ellas
Para que viniera el sol.

which so pleased his majesty that he joined in the game.

A poem written in a lady's album, 'Un Nubarron,' possesses much merit. Dr. Quesada contributes a tale founded on fact, relative to the execution of nine bandits in Monte Video, A.D 1801. Sor Spano has a pretty sonnet to a lady. 'Memoirs of Bolivar,' by Camacho, narrate that the priest baptised him by the name 'Simon,' saying he would one day be the Simon Maccabeus of America. This paper is very good throughout. Dn. Manuel R. Garcia's Studies on Federal Law are very dry, though apropos. Captain Mancilla has notes on Argentine Literature, translated from the German. The history of Paraguay, reviewed by J. M. Estrada, calls for longer notice than our space admits. Records of Chilian Literature, by Briseño, are of especial interest to South American students.

We cannot close this entertaining periodical without heartily complimenting the Editors on the excellent repertoire of the 'Revista,' which affords much agreeable reading, without the animosity, faction, and verbiage which heretofore formed the rule of Argentine literature. We recommend our readers to take the 'Revista;' if they know Spanish they will find it highly interesting; and if they don't, no better class book can be had for acquiring pure Castillian. The office is 241 Calle Moreno.

FOURTH JULY, 1863.

In saluting the United States on this great national festival we comply with a sorrowful duty. Bleeding at every pore—distracted and torn by the most savage civil war the world ever witnessed—struggling no longer for conquest, but for its very existence—the once happy, prosperous United States presents on this eighty-seventh anniversary of its independence a sight heart-rending to every friend of humanity.

We will not now enter into a history of all her woes, neither will we assume to ourselves the right of justifying the conduct of the North, or extenuating that of the South, but we will salute the United States of America as it once was, and as it, please God, yet will be again—"the Republic of the Universe."

The country of a Washington, a Jefferson, a Webster, even though humbled to the very dust by the hateful passions of her blind children, will ever possess the sympathies and good wishes of every upright and honest man. Granted that there are strong prejudices against Americans—granted even that their institutions are ridiculed and laughed at—in their hour of prosperity they were a great and noble people; they afforded a home and plenty to millions of destitute Europeans. Even in this very hour of mourning and affliction, have they not sent over their vessels laden with food to avert the horrors of starvation?

Who is there who has danced on the glassy waves of her lakes and rivers, traversed through her majestic forests, sojourned in her busy cities, and enjoyed the hospitality of her once happy people, will not now join with us in our sympathy at her present misfortunes and trials?

From the banks of Mississippi to the rocky shores of the Atlantic, there is fire and bloodshed; from the once charming tobacco fields of Virginia to the praries of Texas there is rebellion. The passions of men, urged on by the contending interests of localities and production, have through the basest treachery been allowed to keep advancing steadily since 1832, until at last the noxious stream assumed the proportions of a torrent, and burst upon the whole country, submerging for the moment its institutions, and covering in one awful sea of blood almost every vestige of North American Republicanism.

We congratulate the Americans upon the news of victory brought by the French packet on the very eve of this festival, and though it may be deemed by some to be but a gleam of sunshine in the storm, still will we cling with hope to the gory standard of General Banks, and even here in the most southern spot of civilized America, bid that valiant captain hope and keep firm in defence of the stars and stripes.

Old stars and stripes, torn and riddled, dyed crimson with the gore of loyalty and rebellion, we catch you up on this 4th of July, 1863, and planting you anew on the topmost summit of the Rocky mountains, pray that you may ever wave as the only recognised flag of that country which has ever been the home of destitute and oppressed humanity.

ENGLISH SEMINARY SOIREE.

Apollo's votaries are, we rejoice to see, on the increase. The Glee Club finds several 'other Richmonds in the field,' and our foreign residents are becoming highly musical. Not long ago we mentioned an amateur society of philharmonics which meets in our south end, while the recent British hospital benefit shows that the north is also well represented. On Thursday evening we had the pleasure to assist at a soiree of the West-end, being an entertainment by the music class of Mr. Nicholson's English seminary.

A select company had been invited, including some members of the Glee Club, who kindly lent their vocal talents to the general amusement. The renowned professor, Sig. Nannetti, directed the pianoforte performances with infinite taste, skill, and execution; while the violin players under Mr. Woolfert displayed every proof of the assiduity of the master and artistic talent of the pupils.

The first piece was a violin duet by Master Vic'e and the professor, the former a youth about twelve years old. Then a trio, in which Masters Nicholson and Rojas contended, pari passu, for the palm: both were warmly applauded. The 'Kyrie Eleison' of Mozart was well sung by the Misses Nicholson (3), Mr. Miles, and Messrs. Mackern. The choir would have done honour to any cathedral, for harmony, tune, vigour, and expression: in fact we never heard the sacred composer better rendered. A symphony, played by Miss Livingstone on the piano and Mr Nicholson, jun., on the violin, was much admired.

After an interlude devoted to corporal refection, the intellectual repast continued with Mozart's "Qui tollis peccata," by the same singers as the Kyrie Eleison, Master Nicholson again accompanying on the piano. Then "Norma" by professor Nannetti and M. Nicholson, on the piano and violin; followed by a duett of Mdlles. Livingstone and Nicholson. Mr. Miles gave a very fine Italian solo from Wm. Tell. Sig. Nannetti played some charming airs from "Trovatore" with great effect Mr Woolfert and his pupils contributed a grand violin composition by Bruni. Master Nicholson and Miss Livingstone gave a duett on the violin and pianoforte, and the entertainment closed with the prison duett of Trovatore, charmingly sung by Master and Miss Nicholson.

We hope this class of soirées will become more frequent, as it is unfortunately very scarce to find young ladies of this country singers. Mr. Nicholson has given a good example: in fact we rather fancied we were again in the land of Moore, Balfe, Vousden and Lover, than in the stupid prosaic "Athens of South America."

ARGENTINE DIPLOMACY.

The whole truth respecting Mr. Varela's difficulties with the French Government is out at last. D. Hector has sent copies of the correspondence. The most extraordinary part of the whole affair is the Foreign Minister's note, which is as follows:—

"Dear Hector,

"There is some sort of rumour current here that they don't want to receive you in France as you have not written a line to me; I don't believe it."

Taking this as a sample of the correspondence carried on at the Foreign Office, we must say that the Minister's style is so delightfully free and easy that it quite takes our fancy. There is something so decidedly hostile to red-tapeism in this affectionate mode of addressing a foreign agent that we think Chesterfield is outdone, and Earl Russell might well afford to study River Plate diplomacy.

If we could only get a peep into Dr. Rufino's official despatches per last mail, we would probably find his last letter to Mr. Sampson, our Consul-General in London, run thus:—

"Dear Sampson,

"The currency of this country is in a most shocking state. Will you like a good fellow say what chance have we of a loan. All sorts of rumours are afloat here that poor Saavedra has applied and been refused, but as I have not received a line from you I don't believe it. Yours truly,

RUF. ELIZALDE.

Our readers will perceive that this is another proof that we oftentimes have news before the Government itself. As regards camp information, we know more of what is going on in every partido than the Governor, ministers, and country judges all put together, as we have letters from all parts of the province daily.

The refusal of the French Government to acknowledge our friend D. Hector we knew of and published two days before the minister was aware of the circumstance. The only thing we did not know was the affectionate style of Argentine diplomatic correspondence.

TO MINISTER DOMINGUES

We call the attention of our Finance Minister to the thriving farmers of Chivilcoy, and the splendid crop of wheat and maize this year. A gentleman, who has had many years' experience in farming in this province, visited us yesterday for the purpose of fomenting the growth of tobacco. He states that in the Southern parts of Buenos Ayres tobacco can be grown to the greatest advantage—that he has tried it himself, and the crop never missed. Now, as our produce is at present unable to pay for our imports, it may not be amiss to call public attention to the great facilities which this country affords for the tobacco planter. Land is cheap and well adapted. Hundreds of beggars on horseback are to be met with in every partido; cattle, owing to the great seca, is becoming very scarce; sheep are dear, and not to be got without money, and immigration is steadily on the increase. Could the gaucho who now lives in a miserable hovel, depending upon the charity of his neighbours for the means of existence, be but convinced that a couple of squares of tobacco would yield him the means of supporting his little family decently—could he be but persuaded that when his little crop was ready he would not be dragged off to the battle field to fight for 'La Patria'—that a good remunerative price could always be had for his produce—we feel confident these much abused children of the Pampa would betake themselves to tobacco-growing, if the seed could be obtained.

Now as we find a decided objection to cotton growing in this province, we hope to enlist Minister Dominguez's sympathies on behalf of tobacco planting. We call upon the minister to supply seed to every Juez de paz in the province, with directions to distribute among the poor gauchos, with instructions for planting, &c. We may not all eat bread, but the poorest gaucho in the camp smokes tobacco. Could we but only produce as much tobacco as we consume, we would have less ounces to send to Paraguay, Brazil, and Havannah.

Now it is perfectly useless to be maintaining a governor, ministers, clerks, &c., if the industrial capabilities of the country are for ever to remain undeveloped. We do insist that the remote cause of all our troubles is the great attention that is paid to everything save industry. We ask the Government to buy, at the cost of the country, several tons of seed, and send them out at once to the camp judges. If the governor won't do it—if the ministers will not attend to us, then we shall be obliged to get the seed ourselves, and set the ball in motion.

EDITORS' TABLE.

The news from the interior is of the most satisfactory nature. A special chasque arrived in town yesterday from General Paunero, with the intelligence that the battle has at last taken place with the Chacho, who has suffered a most tremendous defeat, over 300 killed and 400 taken prisoners. Peñaloza has however escaped, and Sandes and his men are in hot chase after him. We sincerely hope that he will be caught, and thus an end put to this lamentable civil war.

The Menay arrived at last from Montevideo, and Flores' news will be found in another column. We are glad that our communication with Montevideo is again secure: one of the greatest inconveniences that could exist was the stoppage last week of the steamers. English letters are now all in vogue in the sister Republic, a heavy sort of document we see published in the 'Siglo,' in reply to Mr. Gowland's note to that paper, but as the people who penned the document omit to give their names, it is not regarded as bona fide. Mr. Gowland in his letter did not express himself more in favour of Blanco than Colorado: he only stated that as a friend of law and order he deprecated these eternal revolutions. We deny that there is an independent English foreigner in Montevideo who differs with Mr. Gowland on this subject. The Uruguay Republic has a constitution why not therefore effect whatever change the majority willed, by constitutional measures, and not by fire and rapine. We indorse Mr. Gowland's opinions to the very letter. If foreigners hated these countries—if they longed for their ruin and desolation, they could not adopt a better plan than in lending their moral support to every filibuster that starts up. It is because we honestly labour for the advancement of the country that we offer such uncompromising hostility both to Penaloza and Flores. They may have their wrongs to avenge, and their grievances to redress, but all this will not justify revolution.

On to-morrow the municipal elections will be held in the parishes of Piedad, San Miguel and Socorro, to elect members in place of Dr. Bosch Salvareza, Durand, Vivar and Peralta. We hope that the newly elected members will have the same spirit as the outgoing gentlemen.

The French paper, 'Le Progres,' is going ahead: its subscription list is daily increasing, and its columns more and more interesting.

The Progresso ball and the delightful opera 'Norma' are advertised for next week, 7th and 8th July. We hope they will be both well attended.

The benefit of Dña. Maria Sorrel de Cueva will take place this night in Colon. We understand that nearly every seat in the house has been already engaged: This lady is one of our most popular actresses, and merits well the support which she has received.

The Reports of the Committee appointed by the Government to inspect the works of the Buenos Ayres Great Northern Railway Company is before us. What the English stockholders will make out of it, we are at a loss to say, as we doubt if one of them understands a word of Spanish; or possibly the manager thinks that so important a document would be of little interest to them. As there is scarcely a native stockholder in the company, as the road is worked on English capital, and belongs to absentee Englishmen, we think it right to hint to the agent that all such documents should be published in English as well as Spanish. We hear from an indirect source that the works of this road are rapidly progressing, and that the contractor hopes to have the line open to San Fernando on the 1st of next December; also that the traffic of the road is good, but we have not seen the returns.

Yesterday's "Tribuna" contains a lengthy but well-written letter from Dñ. Hector Varela: the only subject upon which it treats is the Mexicans; whose heroic defence of Puebla attracts even our admiration, worthy of a better people and a better cause.

FORTIN DE ARECO MURDER.

Dear Sir,

The sanguinary perpetrator of the above-named atrocity, is supposed to be roving between Salto and Pergamino. There are so many men going and describing him, that it is impossible for me to note him adequately, but his demoniacal name is Charley Assassin; height, 5 feet 6 inches; body, 3½ yards in rotundity; hair, bay colour; whiskers, same; forehead broad; eyes, brown fiery, consequently devilish; nose, short, thick, and all on one side, like the handle of a jug. Altogether, he is a person you could not pass in the camp without turning round to look at him, provided you were not afraid of getting stabbed for your observation. Sooner or later he will be punished—the red hand of God's vengeance is over the murderer. Those who deliberately and unlawfully shed human blood, should be execrated by every good man: and those who are implicated in the murder, if they do not repent sincerely, they will be most assuredly punished by an offended God.

As the Jews dashed their door-posts with blood on the Passover, so does the assassin, with the gore of his victim, crimson the thresholds of those who shelter him. Horrible it is, day after day, to hear of atrocious and odious murders committed by demons, in the form of human beings. The social compact, through every fibre, trembles at its consequences. Not only policy, but law: not only law, but nature; not only nature, but religion, deprecate and denounce it: parent and offspring, youth and age; the dead from the tomb; the child from its cradle; creatures scarce alive, and creatures still unborn; the grandsire shivering on the verge of death; the infant quickening in the mother's womb, all, with one assent, re-echo God, and execrate the assassin.

I am, yours, &c.

CAPTURE OF PUEBLA.

General Forey stormed Puebla on 31st March and the following day. The city was defended street by street, and house by house, many Americans and other foreigners joining in the defence; but it was carried at last, with a loss of 5 officers killed, and 56 soldiers; 30 officers wounded, and 413 privates. The assault lasted six days, and it was frequently necessary to blow up the houses, burying the defenders in their ruins. The whole town is considered to be in French hands, and 'La Patrie,' with calm impudence, quotes the defence as proof that the Mexicans are friendly to French occupation. The Mexicans, then, must be good, for they lay down their lives for their friends. The 'Moniteur' publishes the following report of General Forey to the Minister of War—Cerro San Juan, April 2, 1863—Monsieur le Marechal—My general report of the 2d instant will have informed your Excellency of the progress of the works of the siege of Puebla up to the 29th of March. I had fixed on that day for the attack upon Fort San Xavier, and I have now the honour to send to your Excellency the details of that operation. Fort San Xavier is defended on its western side by a bastion, on the north by a curtain, on the east by a half-moon covering the entrance on the town side, and on the south by an irregular bastion. These works, forming a continuous 'enceinte,' surround a vast construction, which comprises a Penitentiary connected with the Convent of San Xavier. The whole of this solid structure has a length of 180 metres, and a width of 80 metres. It contains three inner courts, and various outhouses. The approaches were covered by necessary defensive works, and flanked by numerous works still intact. The defence, therefore, was easy, and the internal arrangements allowed to be made to the last extremity. It was indispensable to get possession of this great obstacle. Our engineering works had brought us up quite close to it. The fire of our artillery had destroyed its batteries. It remained for the infantry to do the rest. Confident in the vigour and energy of my troops, I did not hesitate to order the assault. The 1st battalion of Foot Chasseurs and a battalion of the 2d Zouaves formed the attacking columns, independently of two battalions from the trenches. I entrusted the execution of this important operation to General Bazaine, who, accompanied by his Staff, took the command of the trenches at 1, p.m. At four p.m., all our batteries opened a heavy fire on the Penitentiary, which destroyed its outworks. At 5 p.m., at a given order, our fire ceased. General Bazaine, placed in the fourth parallel, gave the signal. Repeated shouts of 'Vive l'Empereur!' responded to it, and the first column, issuing forth from the trenches, advanced at a charge against Fort Xavier, scaled the parapet, and forced an entrance.

The enemy was for a moment disconcerted, but in a few minutes a hail of bullets was sent from the crenellated walls, terraces, and windows upon our men. The Mexicans at the same time opened masked guns from behind the barricades; a field battery placed in front of Fort Carmen also opened fire against us, as did also all the other forts, but this deluge of grape did not stop the advance of our troops. The second column soon followed the first, and forced an entrance into the Penitentiary. The garrison, which consisted of about seven hundred men, made a show of resistance. For the first time, the Mexicans felt the points of our bayonets; they gave way before the impetuosity of our attack. Driven from story to story, from room to room, some succeeded in escaping, many fell, the rest were captured. Trains had been laid in various parts of the building, but owing to the energy of Captain Barrillon, of the Engineers, they were not fired, and no damage was done. The enemy, finding that we had got possession of the Penitentiary, attempted to retake it. A reserve of 2,000 Mexicans advanced on the east front, but the Chasseurs and Zouaves, who had taken possession of the first story of the building, received them with so well sustained a fire that they were compelled to fall back behind the barricades in the town. The enemy still kept up a heavy fusillade, which lasted till half-past seven o'clock. The loss of the enemy was serious, as the interior of the building was full of bodies. We captured three mortars, one field-piece, and a quantity of ammunition, with two hundred prisoners, including two colonels and eight officers. Our officers and men deserve the highest praise for their courage and discipline during the fight. Forey, Commander-in-Chief. "La Patrie" says:—"The Mexican flag, or rather the flag of Juarez, counted among its defenders deserters from General Prim's army, Englishmen, Americans, and a great number of cosmopolite soldiers which the European Continent provides in all adventurous wars. The presence of these various elements explains in part the unexpected resistance which has been made."

IMPORTANT FROM MONTEVIDEO.

PACIFIC ARRANGEMENT.

The "Pais" confirms what we had before stated, that an amicable settlement has been arrived at between the Argentine and Oriental republics The point of international law is to be referred to a mixed Commission of 3 Argentine and as many Oriental doctors, with an umpire elected by common accord. The "Pulaski" and "Salto" are to be released, and each, simultaneously, to salute the other's flag.

General Medina has been brought into Montevideo, seriously ill, and Colonel Lucas Moreno named to succeed him as Commander in Chief of all forces south of Rio Negro; this appointment has caused some dissatisfaction

Mr Gowland's manifesto against the 'Siglo' has caused some alarm in that camp, and the masquers attempt to counteract its effect by getting up an anonymous English letter (with 18 errors) in favour of the ambiguous print

A bounty of 4 doubloons is offered for those who enlist for 6 months service. A collection is being made for Colonel Lamela, cashiered by President Mitre. It is rumored Flores is about to make a second descent on Paysandu. The Brazilian Chargé d'affaires is made Resident Minister at Montevideo, and his Secretary is removed to Washington.

DEFEAT OF CHACHO.

MAGNIFICENT BLOODSHED!

An overland courier brought yesterday the report of a great battle, in which 400 rebels were slain, we do not know whether during or after the battle. We are glad, however, that order is partly restored, Paunero having entered Cordova. There are 400 prisoners, who will probably experience Argentine clemency. The Chacho of course escaped, with 30 followers, and, as may be expected, Sandes is close behind, just about to catch him.

Ounces opened at 458, being $2 4 less than the closing price yesterday There was a decided effort to run ounces down, as the bears calculated that the chasque's news from the interior would help them, but about one o'clock there was a sort of feeling that ounces were in demand. They were selling at that hour three dollars dearer than at what they opened, and with an upward tendency. They closed firm at 466½, buyers.

After Lolsa hours we hear they were selling at 4?8 cash. The cash sales were very insignificant, amounting only to 872.

A great rush was made to secure ounces for Saturday at present figures, and in fact it was this which mainly tended to stiffen the market, as it is rumoured that some large transactions remained over from the end of the month to be settled to-morrow,

The news from the interior had no apparent effect whatever on our money market. It was said last week when news of the Chachos defeat would come, ounces would tumble 20 or $30, the news has come, the victory over this arch rebel could hardly be more complete and still ounces instead of falling have positively gone up, not 4 reales or a dollar but 5 dols, per ounce this is what baffles all calculation, and proves most clearly that politics and civil war has ceased to have much influence over our money market, Ounces it is said are coming up from Montevideo, brought up by certain parties to drive the market down this may be true but the specie imports must be indeed insignificant when they fail in the presence of victory, and absence of business demand to add one per cent to the value of our paper. The Bank it is true is no longer advancing gold, but it is asserted by many that the reason is because it has not got them, and that the shopkeepers who owe ounces are kept back from paying them in the hope of a sudden fall, He would be a wise man who could tell what ounces will be at the end of the year if some effectual remedy is not at once adopted, Sr, Romeros plan which we are happy to see our spirited colleague El Commercio approves of, should be brought before the Chambers, and at once passed, then and not till then can we see our way with the paper dollar.
